Overall Impressions, Comments, and/or Concerns

General comments or concerns that should be noted that haven’t already been addressed?

In March, the new Camp Glenwood program went into effect. As of the date of the inspection, 11 boys were in the old program and 9 were in the new program. This causes some complexity for staff. Youth under the old program are there for 6 to 9 months and are on a point system. Youth on the new program are there for 9 to 12 months and are on a level-based program. There are 7 levels that need to be completed in that time. Following successful completion of Phase I at the Camp, youth are provided with wrap-around services for themselves and their families at home (Phase II) with electronic monitoring.

Staff overlaps on Wednesdays as half the staff work Sunday through Wednesday and the other half from Wednesday through Saturday. They hold a multidisciplinary team meeting on Wednesdays to review each youth’s progress.

Availability of vocational training is excellent. This gives the older youth experience with a number of blue-collar jobs that pay well. This exposure helps them find out what kind of work they might enjoy as a vocation. Taken with their schooling experience, they can make better-informed decisions about whether they want to continue to college or consider an apprenticeship.

Summary: Overall impression of the program, areas of concern and areas of excellence:

Overall, the atmosphere at the Camp seems very positive, with good relationships between the staff and the youth. The inspection team ate lunch with two separate groups of youth. The youth at one table were very positive. They enjoyed the fishing trip and were looking forward to an upcoming camping trip. They praised the food, as being much better than at the Hall. One also spoke positively about his experience caring for the chickens. At the other table, youth talked about the good food and the range of sports activities available. After lunch a number of the youth were working in the garden and took obvious pride in what they were doing.

How/Where do students receive instruction when school is over-crowded or it is raining? Students receive their instruction in classrooms or the library. The walkways are covered so rain is not a problem. Sometimes instructions are given in the garden or outside.

How many minutes of instruction per week do students receive?

The students are in class the required number of minutes per week. Six classes a day, five days a week. There are after-school programs, too.

Do students attend school within three (3) days of placement?

Students usually attend class the first or second day of placement.

How are limited English-speaking students identified and served? How soon are these services provided once the student has been identified as non-English proficient?

Right now there is only one student that has been identified. He is pulled out one day a week for special instruction.

Propose areas of Commendation and Improvement for the school program.

Commendation: School program is strong because of the addition of the Personalized Learning Program from Summit.org on individual computers allowing students to learn at their own individual pace. The teacher is there to assist and supplement the curriculum. The program tracks the student’s progress and provides tests and exams that must be passed before a student is able to move on or pass the class.
Camp Glenwood
Summary Impressions

Irv Rollins, JJDPC Educational Inspection Team Lead

The educational program at Camp Glenwood has considerable potential. The environment presents multiple learning opportunities. The rural setting could serve as a classroom for basic skill acquisition and mastery of the general and social sciences.

The school administration acknowledges these and other benefits of the camp setting. However, recruiting and maintaining qualified teachers at Camp Glenwood School represents an ongoing challenge. Students may be regressing academically because of the school’s inability to employ fully qualified teachers in some core subjects.

Sadly, for a good part of the 2016-1017 academic year, the science class was taught by a series of instructors not possessing the appropriate science teaching authorizations. This credentialing failure limits a teaching assignment to no more than twenty (20) school days, necessitating the recruitment and employing of another short-term instructor every twenty days.

There is no doubt that the Camp Glenwood School administration is making every effort to recruit and employ appropriately certified teachers. As of the writing of this report, customary strategies have not been successful. The administration is encouraged to maintain their teaching and learning focus while thinking out of the restrictions of the usual recruitment process.

- Is it possible for the County Office of Education to subcontract with La Honda School District and/or Cabrillo Unified School District for fully credential subject specialists?

- Should the principal work with the San Mateo County Office of Education in order to prepare a series of 20 day units of instruction to ensure that mandated curriculum is accessed and students are exposed to mandated curriculum concepts?

- Does the recruitment of teacher interns from local teacher training institutions; for example, San Francisco State University, the University of San Francisco, or Notre Dame de Namur University, represent a potential solution to providing subject matter specialists? (NOTE: University interns receive supervision not only from the school principal but from their university of enrollment.)

- Should the County Office of Education evaluate the possibility of assigning additional supervision to the Camp Glenwood School in order to ensure that mandated curriculum is taught and students are exposed to an instructional program that maximizes their academic curiosity and learning?

Camp Glenwood provides multiple opportunities for students to learn how to be successful students. The probation staff, in the role of the parent, attempts to support students as they learn to recover from social and academic failure and to experience—many for the first time—the intrinsic satisfaction of successfully completing the work of youth, being successful students.

Curricular Feedback
We spoke with nine students as a group using a prepared set of questions.

In Math, they liked the individualization and feedback offered by computer-based learning, and that the program required them to pass a skills test before they could proceed to the next level. They conveyed a sense of achievement.

For English and Social Studies, they expressed admiration for the quality of teaching and the caring this teacher demonstrates. These were pilot classes of ILP. Our observation was that the content was robust. The students were currently studying the internment of Japanese-American during WWII. Unprompted, they showed writing samples and ask for feedback from commissioners. It was obvious that the elements of formal writing were being taught. Members of the probation staff approached us to compliment this teacher, as well. We understand that this teacher has not been asked back for next year.

Students appeared unconcerned by the lack of Science curriculum and may not realize that deficit to their learning. They did mention the emotional disruption of having so many teachers since January.

Recommendations
The Camp Glenwood students made two strong requests that are under the supervision of Probation, but affect school success. The first is that they feel they would benefit if after school programming was scheduled to begin 1/2 hour later than it does currently. They say this will give them time to see a teacher after class if they miss class due to a pullout or are confused. They would also like after school tutoring which is not currently given, and would like that tutoring to be 1-on-1.

I echo the concern expressed by Irv Rollins as to the lack of a permanent teacher for Math and Science.
